Carolyn Maloney, A Representative Who Works

Opposes Proposal to Cut Multifamily Portfolios of Fannie and Freddie

On October 9, 2013, Rep. Carolyn B. Maloney, Ranking Member of the House Financial Services Subcommittee on Capital Markets and Government Sponsored Enterprises, wrote the Federal Housing Finance Agency opposing further cuts to the multifamily businesses of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, the guarantors of $63 billion of loans backing multifamily apartment buildings per year nationwide.

"As the representative of 715,000 constituents residing in thriving urban neighborhoods in New York, where multifamily housing is our single family housing, I urge you to halt further cuts to the multifamily businesses at the GSEs," Maloney said.

Presses for Action on Comprehensive Immigration Reform Bill

On the Global Day of Action for immigration reform (October 8, 2013), Rep. Maloney called on the House majority to take up a comprehensive immigration reform bill, H.R. 15, the "Border Security, Economic Opportunity, and Immigration Modernization Act" to fix our broken immigration system. Rep. Maloney is an original cosponsor of H.R. 15.

"Our immigration system is broken and everyone knows it," Rep. Maloney said. "Back in June, the Senate acted in a responsible way – a bipartisan way – by passing commonsense reforms with a strong vote of 68 to 32. Now the House must step up, pass a bill and get it into conference with the Senate. Comprehensive immigration reform will reduce our deficit, grow our economy, and honor our history as a nation of immigrants."

According to the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office, enactment of the bipartisan Senate-passed comprehensive immigration reform bill would reduce the deficit by $850 billion. CBO also estimates that the Senate-passed bill would increase economic growth by 3.3% in 2023 and 5.4% in 2033.

Maloney is an original cosponsor of a Democratic proposal designed to gain bipartisan support.

Possible options the FHFA is exploring include restrictions on the length of loan terms, simplification and standardization of loan products, limits on property financing, limits on business activities, restrictions on the length of loan terms, simplification and standardization of loan products, and limits on property financing.

Gear Up for An Emergency, And Start Now

Emergencies tend to be off our minds unless we're in, or recovering from, one. Hurricane Sandy was the most recent of the city's natural disasters, unthought-of and unplanned-for, until the costs and miseries of the aftermath. It makes sense to get ready beforehand, and the Ready New York campaign, of the city's Office of Emergency Management, is a priceless resource available for free. There's only one hitch: you've got to do some work.

In case you're prone to procrastinate, it's motivating to learn that there are 12 hazards that could lead to emergencies in New York City: Building Collapses, Carbon Monoxide, Coastal Storms and Hurricanes, Disease, Earthquakes, Extreme Heat, Fires, Flooding, Hazmat and Radiation, Severe Weather, Utility Disruptions, and Winter Weather.

But why brood when you can take action? Find out all you need to know from the OEM.

Muriel Faye “Mickie” Siebert died, on August 24, 2013, at the age of 84.

Siebert was a pioneer known as “The First Woman of Finance,” a reflection of her financial acumen and personal drive. Born and raised in Cleveland, Ohio, she came to New York City to join a Wall Street firm, and founded Muriel Siebert & Co., Inc., in 1967. That same year, she became the first woman to head a member firm of the New York Stock Exchange, despite never having finished college due to her father’s illness.

In 1990, she created the Siebert Entrepreneurial Philanthropic Plan, through which she shared half of her firm’s profits from new securities underwriting with charities of the issuers’ choices. Siebert was also on the boards of several major charities.

An outspoken advocate for women in industry, Siebert served as president of the New York Women’s Agenda in 1998, during which the NYWA developed its program, “Financial Literacy for Women.”

Muriel Siebert was a longtime resident of Turtle Bay and the Hamptons, and a member, for many years, of the Turtle Bay Association. She will be missed.

Terri Heveran, 85

Mary T. “Terri” Heveran passed away at home, on October 10, 2013, following several years of illness.

Born in Washington, D.C., Terri graduated from the College of New Rochelle and went on to a varied career that included work as a stockbroker, writer, editor, proofreader and title searcher.

Terri was active in the community and participated with Mensa, the League of Women Voters and Friends of Dag Hammarskjöld Plaza. She also led a Teilhard study group in New York City. She was a good neighbor and a true friend of the Turtle Bay Association, attending many events and writing for the Turtle Bay News.

She had also lived in Connecticut and will be buried there. We wish her peace. She was a lovely lady and will be missed.

Community Board Six: What It Is, What It Does, and How to Participate

Manhattan's Community Board Six is one of 59 boards that represent local neighborhoods throughout the five boroughs. Up to 50 unsalaried members serve on each board, half nominated by their district's city council members. Appointed by the borough presidents, members must reside, work, or have a significant interest, and be active, in their communities. Each board has a district manager who operates an office, hires staff, and implements procedures to improve the delivery of city services to the district.

CB6 District Neighborhoods

The board's 50 members represent the communities of Manhattan's East Side, from East 14th Street to East 59th Street, covering Gramercy Park, Kips Bay, Murray Hill, Peter Cooper Village, Stuyvesant Town, Sutton Place, Turtle Bay, and Tudor City.

The board works to improve quality of life in the area, monitoring municipal service delivery and meeting with city officials to resolve community issues and concerns, including: the police and fire departments, traffic, housing, street repaving and reconstruction, building construction, sidewalk maintenance, and tree plantings. It makes recommendations on land use and zoning, sidewalk cafes, liquor licenses, street activity permits, and newsstands. It also has an active role in the city's budget process and in implementing capital projects in the district.

Home to Many Institutions

The district is home to the U.N. and hundreds of missions and diplomatic residences. Medical facilities include Beth Israel Hospital, Bellevue Hospital, the VA Medical Center, and the NYU Langone Medical Center. Numerous substance abuse, mental health and ambulatory care clinics, and portions of the New York Eye and Ear Hospital are located in the district, which is also home to Baruch College, the School of Visual Arts; NYU School of Medicine; NYU College of Dentistry; and Yeshiva University.

The assessed value of commercial and residential properties, the daily influx of workers, and tourists who shop and visit the district all contribute significantly to New York's economic base.

CB6 Committees

Eight committees specialize in issues: Budget & Governmental Affairs; Business Affairs and Street Activities; Health, Senior and Disability Issues; Housing, Homeless & Human Rights; Land Use &

Waterfront; Parks, Landmarks & Cultural Affairs; Public Safety, Environment & Transportation; and Youth & Education.

Major Projects and District Concerns

CB6 oversees a variety of development, infrastructure and city service projects now under way in the district: East Midtown Rezoning; Sanitation Garage; 250 East 57th Street; DOT Projects; Former ConEd Site; Micro Units; MTA Projects; Parks Projects; Privately Owned Public Space; Third Water Tunnel; U.N. Development; and Waterfront Access.

Meet Dan Miner, New District Manager of CB6

Talk to Dan Miner and you'll discover a neighborhood champion as dedicated as they come, which is fitting, since Dan recently joined CB6 as district manager following Toni Carlina's retirement.

Dan works closely with district chair Sandro Sherrod and the board's 50 members, who, he says, show "impressive expertise and dedication" on behalf of the district. He also engages local participants in dialog that positions the board, and other public servants, to tackle the concerns raised by residents, merchants, cultural, health and community organizations, and the needs of major projects under way in the area.

Connections are a key component of Sandro's and Dan's roles, and they're intent on encouraging growth in neighborhood participation. Acting as links between citizens and the government, both are active in opening and maintaining multiple, mutual lines of communication with the public. Their success, so far, is manifest in CB6's greatly enhanced website and the introduction of online public access to monthly full board meetings.

Asked about "a day in the life" at his job, it's clear that Dan enjoys it. Supporting the demands of a district that packs approximately 142,745 (2010 U.S. Census Bureau) residents into 1.4 square miles, requires multi-tasking, long hours, and the considerable diplomacy required to collaborate with so many people who hold many points of view. But Dan is in the right place.

His past experience suits him for his job. Previously, he served as vice president at the Long Island City Partnership, where he worked on their successful campaign to transform an industrial ghost town into the vital residential, commercial and cultural hub it has become.

Dan wants residents to attend CB6 events, visit the website, and sign up for the e-newsletter. He sums up his focus in words that define what community-building is all about, "Get involved, and join the conversation."

Eye on The “Y”

The Vanderbilt YMCA: A History of Community Service

By LEE FRANKEL

Walking west from Second Avenue, along 47th Street, you’ll notice a lot of activity as you near Number 224, the Vanderbilt YMCA. It’s been located in Turtle Bay for so long, and served so many residents and visitors, that it’s like an old friend we simply call, “the Y.”

Since history in the city tends to vaporize immediately as things change, here’s a pop quiz to find out how much you know about the YMCA’s past and its Vanderbilt Branch. Confession: I was stumped. (See beneath for answers.)

1. The first YMCA was organized in the city of _____, in the year ____.
2. A retired sea captain founded the first U.S. YMCA, in _____, in ____.
3. The Vanderbilt Y was initially known as the:
 - a. Turtle Bay Y
 - b. Grand Central Y
 - c. East Side Y
 - d. Railroad Y
 - e. None of the above
4. Under an earlier name, the Vanderbilt Y was founded in the year ____.
5. The current location of the Vanderbilt Y was first occupied in the year ____.
6. The Vanderbilt Y received its current name in the year ____.

1. London, 1844; 2. 1851, Boston; 3. d; 4. 1875; 5. 1932; 6. 1972

The Vanderbilt Family Connection

The Y’s name reflects the philanthropy of the Vanderbilt family, whose empire in the shipping and railroad industries began during the “Gilded Age,” dating from the 1870s to the turn of the twentieth century. In 1886, Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt gave the Y, then known as the “Railroad Y,” a building at 361 Madison Avenue.

In 1930, Cornelius Vanderbilt provided the money and leadership to build the familiar building on East 47th Street, between Second and Third Avenues. It opened in 1932, with a swimming pool, bowling alley, social halls, chapel and 300 overnight rooms. Later, it became a branch of the YMCA of Greater New York, and later still, in 1972, changed its name to the Vanderbilt Y. The branch was rededicated in 1992, with a plaque on the building’s façade, to honor the Vanderbilts and their contribution to the YMCA.

The Vanderbilt Y Today

True to its mission “for youth development, for healthy living, for social responsibility,” the Vanderbilt Y attracts, and fulfills the needs of, people at all ages and life stages, providing children’s services, wellness, fitness, family, youth, and teen programs. The Y serves the community with the proud statement, “Everyone is welcome,” and you feel just that when you enter.

Dining in A Secret Garden

BY LOIS AVERY GAETA

Angle your way past the lineup of regulars at Elite Food Bar, and you'll find yourself in a small dining area defined by a colorful fresco, depicting East 48th Street in the 1940s. Walk further into this attractive Greek café, and you'll step into an outdoor garden patio, with a roof that lets the light in. Here, U.N. staffers and locals sit down to home-style meals or hang out over coffee.

When owners and friends Teddy Demos and Nick Frantzeskos opened Elite about 10 years ago, Teddy canvassed the neighborhood to attract customers to the side street location, which is now a popular destination with an extensive menu based on family recipes from their fathers, both of whom were longtime Greek restaurant veterans.

Elite's day begins at 5:30 a.m., when vendors begin delivering fresh ingredients and the staff turns on the giant pot of Brooklyn's Stone Street Coffee. Carmelo, the chef and deliveryman, tosses six whole chickens into a pot to start one soup, and yellow split peas or lentils into a second for a vegetarian option. "Some customers take out four to six soups at a time and freeze them," Teddy notes.

Catered breakfasts are favored by neighborhood offices where workers enjoy the trays of baked goodies, fruit salad, fresh orange juice and coffee. Italian butter cookies are a preferred item. Lunch is the busiest time. "We're all lined up, working as a team. It's hectic," Teddy admits. The salad selection is large, including a variety of delicious combinations served with Nick's delicately seasoned dressings. Wraps are another popular choice, as is turkey breast, which is fresh-roasted daily. Many diners also order Elite's East Side Burgers, prepared with ham, bacon, onions, mushrooms and Swiss cheese.

Though they're very busy, both Nick and Teddy do have outside interests. Teddy goes fishing in Long Island Sound and lets his parents cook the striped bass, porgies and fluke he brings home. Nick is a martial arts fanatic and likes scuba diving.

Elite's owners and staff recognize regular customers and welcome many by name. "We work hard to be a gathering place that is part of the neighborhood family. People can choose anywhere to eat, but they come to Elite because we share their lives: both the happiness and pain," says Teddy.

The restaurant has been a member of the TBA almost since its opening, and has catered several of the TBA's events.

A New Restaurant in The Park

BY CANDI OBRENTZ

Dag's Patio Café is the latest incarnation of an outdoor eating establishment in Dag Hammarskjöld Plaza and is proving to be the best one yet. The café caters to all-day food cravings with breakfast, lunch, dinner and libations, as well as snacks, milkshakes and soft-serve ice cream for those times in between.

Dag's Patio is the latest creation of Mark Grossich and partners Kenneth McClure and Dawn Durham of Hospitality Holdings, which also owns The World Bar, The Carnegie Club and The Campbell Apartment. Having closed an earlier restaurant in DHP, six years ago, McClure, Vice President Group General Manager, says that it's good to be back.

The kiosk's interior has been renovated with a state-of-the-art kitchen, and the modest structure is now adorned with cheerful orange awnings and chairs. Kenneth says that Dag's Patio has received a great response from the community since it opened this past July: no surprise now that neighborhood residents, workers and visitors can enjoy a high-quality burger in a beautiful outdoor space right here in Turtle Bay.

The menu is varied and designed for meat-eaters and vegetarians. It boasts LaFrieda burgers (a world-famous, unique blend of short rib and chuck), hotdogs (beef and vegetarian), breakfast and lunch sandwiches, salads, French fries, baked goods, shakes, and ice cream cups and cones. Beverages include hot and iced Illy coffee and tea, fountain soda, juices, beer, wine and specialty cocktails. I ordered the veggie burger, deliciously served on a crisp bun with Dag's "secret sauce," lettuce, pickles, red onion and cheese. Kenneth agreed that even a diehard carnivore would have relished my burger!

The café's tagline, "You'll Dig Dag's" is apt; Turtle Bay will surely dig this newcomer to the neighborhood.

Happy New Sculpture Appears in Dag Hammarskjöld Plaza

"Love," a large fiberglass sculpture of a dazzling red flower, by Anna Tsarev, has come to Dag Hammarskjöld Plaza. It's a delightful addition to

"Love" by Anna Tsarev, 2013

Turtle Bay, and has become a magnet for photo-taking parents and children, not to mention those walking along the east side Second Avenue.

The installation is part of the Love & Peace Global Sculpture Campaign and is a culmination of Tsarev's artistic endeavors. The flower symbolizes not only the overwhelming power and beauty of nature, but also the intercultural language flowers possess of generosity and friendship through the dialog of art.

Says Tsarev of the Love & Peace Campaign, "My dream is for my flowers to act as beacons and rallying points across the planet – bringing people together on a global scale and through my art start a global conversation."

Bloomberg Announces Cleaner New York Air

New York City has the highest quality air in more than 50 years, according to Mayor Mike Bloomberg, taking credit for his administration's anti-pollution efforts as he prepares to leave office.

The New York Times recently reported on a new city survey showing that sulfur dioxide levels have dropped by 69 percent since 2008, and the level of soot pollution has dropped by more than 23 percent since 2007. The mayor attributed the improvements to the city's campaign to have buildings move from the most polluting kinds of heating oil to using cleaner fuels.

Thanking The N.Y.C. Fire Department

A neighbor wrote to us, recently, praising our local Fire Station, Engine C8, Ladder C2, 8th Battalion, on 51st Street between Third and Lexington Avenues. Noticing a "strong smell" of fire, she quickly called 911. She reports that, "Within six minutes, the fire fighters arrived. They searched everywhere, with no sign of smoke, until they discovered a resident barbecuing. They ordered the barbecue to be properly extinguished once cooking was finished." It's good to know that the heroes of our city's Fire Department are always there protecting us by showing up in record time to do their jobs. Yet again, we say, "Thank you."
