Greenacre Park Fights for Light Against Current Version of East Side Rezoning Plan

he Greenacre Foundation has mobilized the "Fight for Light" on behalf of Greenacre Park to preserve the park's sunlight. The goal is to prevent the onset of shadows that would darken the space in the afternoon if development of several taller buildings is permitted, to the south, through adoption of the proposed Midtown East Side Rezoning plan.

Greenacre Park is situated on 51st Street between Second and Third Avenues and is one of only three "vest-pocket" parks in New York City. The singular outdoor space – about the size of a tennis court – was designed for maximum beauty and function by internationally acclaimed landscape architects Sasaki Associates. It has become a beloved haven for those who live and work in Turtle Bay.

First opened in 1971 through the efforts of the late Mrs. Jean Mauzé, the former Abby Rockefeller, the park features a 25-foot-high waterfall sculpted from huge granite blocks, honey locust trees, lush plantings, sunny seating areas with moveable tables and chairs, and an outdoor cafe. The space even accommodates nature; the sight of sparrows indulging in a daily bath where water runs into a granite basin is a delight. Today, the care of the park remains "in the family" in that Ms. Mauze's granddaughter, Gail

Jay A. Litwin, 40-Year Chairman of 17th Precinct Community Council, Retires

A celebratory crowd of police officers and community residents gathered at the 17th Precinct, on March 23, to celebrate Jay A. Litwin's achievements as Chairman of the 17th Precinct Community Council. After a record, event-filled 40-year term of service in the post, Jay has officially retired. The gathering coincided with Jay's birthday and afforded the opportunity for tributes and walks down memory lane by those who know Jay and have worked with him over the years. A custom-made bench with a plaque was dedicated to Jay and now sits in the 17th Precinct where it will be seen and put to good use every day.

The NYPD's Community Councils were established in 1943. Today, there are 86 councils throughout the five boroughs that act as conduits of information between the

Newsworthy Notes

Sing For Hope Piano Coming to Dag Hammarskjold Plaza

A unique artist-painted piano will reside in Dag Hammarskjold Plaza, watched over by a "piano buddy," and available for visitors of all ages to play. The piano will be one of 50 to 60 such pianos placed in public spaces throughout the city and individually painted by a professional and emerging artist. The piano will stay in the park from June 6 through June 27 and will then be donated to a city school.

Sing for Hope's programs aim to bring the power of the arts to under-resourced communities, including schoolchildren, health care patients, veterans, seniors and the disabled. This year, Sing for Hope is working with the New York City Department of Education.

Recent News from Elected Officials

Rep. Carolyn B. Maloney

Introduced a bill designed to increase loan opportunities for small businesses in developing communities. If passed as drafted, the Investing in America's Small Businesses Act of 2017 would provide grants to Community Development Financial Institutions (CD-FIs) to establish loan-loss reserve funds for small business loans under $50,000. President Trump's recent budget proposal would cut all grant funding from the CDFI Fund. "This is not the time to cut funding for CDFIs; it's a time to expand," Maloney said.

Senator Liz Krueger

Co-sponsor of an initiative to enact a reproductive health act and to create a new article of the Public Health Law (PHL) that revises existing provisions relating to abortion.

The bill in its current form upholds "... comprehensive reproductive health care, including contraception and abortion, [a] s a fundamental component of a woman's health, privacy and equality. The proposed bill declares that it is the public policy of New York State that every individual possesses a fundamental right of privacy and equality with respect to their personal re-

Caulkins, oversees its operations as the President of the Greenacre Foundation.

"Greenacre Park has provided innumerable moments of welcome serenity and escape for residents, families, visitors, and local workers," says Ms. Caulkins.

"The sunshine makes an indispensable contribution to the park's unique appeal."

Fight for Light is focusing on building public awareness of the issue, and includes the launch of a website, the unveiling of Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram channels, outreach to local media, and ongoing communications with city officials.

The campaign is making an impact. Through the efforts of park supporters, Community Board 6 adopted a resolution on March 8 calling upon the City Council to modify the rezoning plan so that the park's sunlight could be preserved. Advocates also attracted the support of a prominent ally when they were joined by the Municipal Arts Society in pushing for mitigating measures. In a March 7 letter to Community Board 6, the Society said that the neighborhood

"cannot afford to allow development under the East Midtown rezoning proposal to cast such an important resource as Greenacre Park in additional shadow."

And while it is premature to predict the final outcome of the rezoning plan, the message seems to be getting through.

More information about Greenacre Park and the Fight for Light is available at GreenacrePark.org, Facebook, Twitter and Instagram.

Morning Star Café: A Favorite Neighborhood Destination

By Lee Frankel

There are good reasons why family-owned Morning Star Café has been a favored destination for almost twenty years. This classic Greek (and thoroughly New York-American) diner attracts a crowd of residents, nearby workers, tourists, and late-night and early-morning diners who count on freshly prepared and delicious food, generous portions, friendly service and a huge menu to choose from at any hour when hunger strikes.

The family Vavilis is a classic New York immigrant success story. Steven Vavilis came here from Greece when he was 17, with no English and no restaurant skills. Joining relatives already in the restaurant business, Steve learned the trade. In 1998, he and his brother Michael opened Morning Star Café, naming it after their sister Ploumou whom Steve had always called his "Morning Star." Steve Vavilis passed away in 2015, and his son George is now at the helm, upholding the tradition of good food and good service launched by his father and uncle.

If you're not yet a Morning Star regular, I recommend becoming one. In the morning, choose from time-honored breakfast dishes. At mid-day, lunch features six fresh soups, classic burgers, sandwiches, salads, French fries and home fries that deliver satisfaction, as do the full dinners of fish, steak, roast chicken, pasta and Greek specialties. At Sunday brunch you can select from a list of 40 omelets, or design your own. If you like a drink with your meal, Morning Star also offers a selection of beer and wine. Personally, I like the desserts. I recently enjoyed the happily not-too-sweet apple pie with a cinnamon-scented crumb topping. And you don't need to look at the clock; you can have whatever you want, at any hour – eat in, take-out, or order for delivery.

Morning Star Café has been featured in Time Out New York, and on the websites Yelp and Facebook, where happy customers have posted many positive reviews.

Real Estate and DevelopmentUpdate

Construction is under way on a 63-story, 124-unit mixed-use tower at 138 East 50th Street. The latest building permits indicate that the tower will encompass 253,222 square feet and rise to 803 feet. Completion is expected in 2018.

Gamma Real Estate paid $86 million, plus $12 million for air rights on its acquisition of the site at 428-432 East 58th Street, in Sutton Place. Plans call for a 700-foot-tall residential tower, designed By Thomas Juul-Hansen's firm with Stephen B. Jacobs Group as executive architect.

The DOB has approved the plans for 249-253 East 50th Street, which appear to comply with the split-lot zoning R10 and R8B for the site. The western part (approximately 25 feet wide) will be six stories high – R8B. The eastern part (approximately 30 feet wide) will be 17 stories high – C10. The original 17-story design throughout was rejected by the DOB. The TBA is satisfied with the solution.

Women's March NYC Begins Walk in Turtle Bay

The Women's March NYC chose Dag Hammarskjold Plaza and Turtle Bay as the meet-up and starting point where marchers gathered, on January 21, the day following the presidential inauguration of Donald Trump. The high-spirited crowd, many carrying signs and wearing signature pink hats, snaked their way through Manhattan streets, ending the protest at Trump Tower on Fifth Avenue and 55th Street.

The day's turnout, estimated by the mayor's office at 400,000, included women, men and children of all backgrounds who came together to uphold women's rights, equality of opportunity for all citizens, and the preservation of democracy seen as endangered by the policies of the new administration and the conservative majority of legislators in the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives.
